Community Reviews for this School

My experience at this school has been nothing but great. There is endless opportunities and the staff is great. The organizations I am involved in allow me to become a leader and the advisers in charge are wonderful.

Most of the teachers work with students who are struggling. Most students strive to do their best even in subjects they struggle in. The music department is a family who works together and creates a great environment to be in where everyone is supported and encouraged to try their best and go out of their comfort zones.

SWHS has been a very fun experience these past 4 years of my life. The school's introduction to us during our freshman year was very fun and full of fun activities to do that allowed us to meet other classmates and our future teachers. Personally, I have had nothing major happen to me in this school such as bullying, abuse, discrimination, and etc. While the food may be questionable at times, overall it still is healthy in its own way. There are lots of teachers and students who are motivated every day and are just fun to have around.

My experience, so far, has been very good. They provide many opportunities, awesome clubs, cool, accepting teachers, and the lunch isn't so bad. Now, the only downside is the kiddos there, but that's with any school. They actually aren't so bad once you learn to ignore them. If I would change something, it'd be to change how the cafeteria is set up. There is little table space and the lunch lines are a bit messy and confusing. I'd also put up when your lunch wave ends. 10/10 would maybe not do it again, but would definitely send my non-existent kids there.

It was average at best. The school culture was really bad with many bomb threats and lots of bullying. The staff did not do anything to prevent the latter and, if anything encouraged it. In classes, it felt a lot like the teachers were simply administrators themselves, rather than trying to improve the lives of their students. In fact, in one class, the teacher showed up late to class most of the time. The administrators, themselves, hovered around monitoring students but never made an effort towards a healthy relationship between students and staff. The athletic coaches at the school were average with the assistant coaches often being better than the head coaches; thus, none of the teams hardly ever finished with a winning record. Finally, the food was awful; if anything, below the subpar line the cafeteria food already sets. The cafeteria staff was very friendly, though. In conclusion, although some people love South West, it definitely had its downsides.
